RICHARD MICO

(c.1590-1661)

The hitherto unknown details of Mico's identity and life were discovered by John Bennett and Pamela Willetts (see MICO-BW). While at Thorndon Hall and Ingatestone, Mico was in touch with Byrd and Okeover. GB-Lcm 1197 is now confirmed as his autograph, which becomes, accordingly, the most authoritative source of the four-part works; his music hand is also found in EIRE-Dm, Z.3.4.7-12 (see DUBLIN P).

The presence of two of the two-part fantasies, un-attributed, in a large French keyboard MS containing works by L. Couperin, Chambonnières and other keyboard composers, is of interest.

There seems little doubt that the attribution to Mico of the first of a sequence of four-part fantasies in two of the MSS, as shown in the table, was intended to govern the whole sequence in each MS. That, together with consideration of style, has led to a confident attribution to Mico of Fantasies 18 and 19. Similar considerations have led to the adoption of two anonymous five-part fantasies as Mico, VdGS Nos. 3 and 4; it is tantalising that Stephen Bing's labelling of the five-part works in John Lilly's great but anonymous collection at Christ Church (see BING W) should have come to a halt on the very brink of these presumed Micos.

Certain of the five-part pavans, with attributions to Deering and Mico, have had to be arbitrarily divided between the two composers.

The five-part Latral is a textless setting of La tra' l sangue, the second section of a three-section madrigal in Monteverdi's third book of five parts (Vattene pur crudel, La tra' l sangue, and Poi ch'ella, to words by Tasso). Parte seconda R. Mico is a textless piece. A central chromatic fugue in Latral, to words hor gui manco la spirito a la dolente, is on a falling subject. A fugue similarly placed in the Mico is on a rising subject. No other connection between the two pieces, or explanation of the contribution by Mico, has yet been discovered.

All this music is published in MICO H.

NOTES

Most of Moss's works for solo lyra viol are found mainly in print; most of them, with a Bc part in staff notation, in the 'Lessons ---' (MOSS 1671); a few in PLAYFORD MRLV, mainly 1669, without Bc part. The pieces are organised into suites; although these are not numbered in the sources, VDG's numbers for airs and suites have been assigned, for convenience.
